

Abstract of the Disclosure:

A data carrier having a non-volatile electronic memory for holding large volumes of data and a microcontroller suitable for performing cryptographic operations. Access to the memory is possible only via the microcontroller. The data carrier is characterized in that, before data are stored in the memory, the user is authenticated for a data source using the microcontroller.

10

MPW/nt